An Accident in the Evening (Emerging Authors) Phil Brown

Phil Brown's poetry is the kind of work you should give to people who think poetry is elitist, or simply too hard to be bothered with. His is the inspiration that comes while you are waiting for that pizza, hitching a ride to a country town on a misty morning, or watching a Chuck Norris video. It's a conversational style that hooks you like the opening lines of a good journalistic piece no surprise here, since Brown is a journalist in his workaday world for Brisbane News, which helps him keep a finger on the artistic pulse of his hometown. This is poetry from inside the real world of a jaded, happy, metropolitan man.
